Forecast For Northeast England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Friday 07 May 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Another cold night with frost. Rain arriving during Saturday morning.

This Evening and Tonight:
Any remaining showers soon dying out and clearing eastwards, to leave all areas dry with some clear spells overnight. Turning chilly with frost, and some temporary fog is possible in prone, rural locations. Clouding over after midnight. Minimum temperature -2 deg C (28 deg F).

Saturday:
After a dry start, cloud and rain will arrive from the southwest by mid-morning and spread across all parts during the afternoon. Turning windy with coastal gales possible. Maximum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Overnight rain clearing to sunshine on Sunday. Some afternoon showers. Staying cool and unsettled into next week with a mixture of sunny spells and scattered showers, some turning heavy.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.